A terrifying vision of power and darkness, the War Helm of Sauron from The Lord of the Rings Museum Collection is a meticulously crafted replica of the helm worn by the Dark Lord himself during the prologue of The Fellowship of the Ring. Cast in reinforced polyresin with a corroded, heat-discolored finish, the helm features a genuine leather-lined and padded interior. Every surface is hand-finished to match the original Weta Workshop prop, capturing the vine-like engravings, iron texture, and six menacing spikes that crowned Sauron in battle. Standing 30" tall, this officially licensed collector's replica is mounted on a custom wood and polystone display stand. It includes a Sauron-scale One Ring replica and a fabric war banner bearing the Eye of Sauron, along with a certificate of authenticity. Individually serial-numbered and produced in limited quantity, this helm is an heirloom-worthy tribute to the enduring legend of Middle-earth.
